My experience at ANU

Reported by Hiroki Takano (starting study at ANU from 2017.7)

Good
Diversity	The ratio of international students is more than 70%, and they are mainly from Asian countries. They have very different career background including governments, United Nations, NGOs. Discussing with them is very interesting!
Courses	We usually have both lectures and tutorials in each course. The distance between lecturers and students is close, and we always have an active discussion in tutorial. When we miss lectures or want to reconfirm the contents, we can see recorded lectures with our own PC.
Academic Supports	We have easy access to academic skill supports, and academic skill advisors check and correct our drafts of the assignments before we submit to lecturers. There are workshops and opportunities to improve English skills for international students, so I can recommend GraSPP students who have not studied abroad like me to apply for ANU!

Cont'd

Bad
Workload	The amount of assignment is overwhelming! I have to deal with them on weekdays and weekends, until late at night.
Course selecting	The flexibility of course selecting is not so high due to degree structure and the amount of courses I can attend in a semester (the maximum amount is 4 courses).

Recommended preparation before starting study at ANU

I recommend the students thinking to apply for ANU to get as many credits you can transfer from GraSPP to ANU as possible to expand your choice of course selection.
