

Introduction to Japanese Law in English (英語による日本法入門) is an experimental class in which we would try to explain various rules and decisions on Japanese law in English. It begins on Monday 8, April, at 10:30 at No. 21 classroom.

Please note that this course would not require students to be good at English, especially speaking. But anyone who will feel it interesting and meaningful should come and join.

See the website for this course at:

<https://sites.google.com/site/utjapaneselaw/home>

I already uploaded the material for the first class. The textbook is so expensive, and we need to discuss it in the first class.

For an introduction, we will show what the purpose of this course is and how we should proceed. If you feel interested in a different comparative perspective on Japanese law, please join it. Norio Higuchi