Africa's Transformation and Strategy for Growth Speaker: African Development Bank's President

Dr. DONALD KABERUKA

June 5th, 2013, Wednesday from 15:00-17:00 at University of Tokyo, Ito Hall

Conference Co-organized by
United Nations University • African Development Bank • University of Tokyo

Since 21st century, the Africa's transformation has been growing. The major theme of the Tokyo International Conference on Africa's Development (TICAD) V to be held in June, 2013, is to strengthen the partnership between Africa and Japan to achieve the sustainable economic growth, inclusive and sustainable social development and peace and security. All of these are for the Bank's vision for ten years which is thus Africa's vision.

In order to strengthen the Africa's economic development through the inclusive growth and the transition to green growth, it is crucial to focus on private sector development, infrastructure, agriculture, energy and food security, human development, good governance and regional integration. Currently, there is also an urgent need to strengthen the human capital development to contribute to the Africa's future. Hence, United Nations University, African Development Bank and University of Tokyo are working on creating a new project called "Education for Sustainable Development in Africa (ESDA)" to support youth and employment and diminish the skills gap between the education sector and labor market needs.

This conference is organized by United Nations University, African Development Bank and University of Tokyo.
