UTokyo/ANU: Why Crawford School of Public Policy?

- Enables you to gain perspective on public policy in the Asia-Pacific region, especially from Australia's POV
- Strong focus on policy analysis, research, and other essential coursework
- Chance to network with some of the brightest and best in Australia – outgoing and friendly student body

UTokyo/ANU: COVID-19 Situation

- Australian cases have significantly declined since their peak in January 2022 and remain low
- Strong and flexible response to COVID-19 – great deal of planning and preparation goes into online courses, which are offered alongside offline counterparts
- Masks remain mandatory indoors on campus, although it seems this policy may change soon
- Off-campus protocol is laxer; masks are still recommended but generally not required anywhere

UTokyo/ANU: Personal Advice

- ANU offers several short, intensive courses that meet only a handful of times each semester. These are a great way to do a deep-dive into a topic in a time-efficient manner, and you will walk away having learned a lot!
- Some classes offer extra workshops to help with essays, policy memos, and other assignments. The people running these workshops are incredibly helpful and offer great insights that will help you improve your writing.

Year 2 at LSE

- Study + live in London, international hub city of Europe
- Opportunity to choose from 1,300+ postgraduate courses at LSE → Not restricted to MPA courses
- LSE reputation
- Diverse classmates from around the world
- Coursework is demanding! Be prepared for this

Year 2 at LSE - Capstone Project

- The Capstone groups tackle socially relevant and topical policy issues and the contribution of MPA students is highly valued by the Capstone clients.
- Students are put into groups of 4-6 for a six-month consultancy style project.
- The Capstone is an excellent opportunity to extend the learnings of Year 1 in the Dual Degree in a professional setting
