● Students should be consulted with and advised by their supervisors to decide the actual schedule of each review. In case the supervisor thinks that it is appropriate for the student to take longer interim review period, the student might be suggested to finish the proposal review earlier than above schedule, for example. Depending on the progress of student's research, he/she might need to spend more than 3 years to complete his/her doctoral program. Also, depending on supervisors (especially in the economics stream), thesis may be required to be almost completed before the proposal review. In this case, Proposal review may be held about half year before graduation. Accordingly, Interim review and Final review will follow quickly after Proposal review.

● In case a student received "Conditional Pass" or "Fail" as the result of the review, he/she should be consulted with his/her supervisor about resubmission or next review opportunity immediately.
